When People Have Psychological Safety at Work, They...

- feel comfortable sharing concerns and mistakes without fear of embarrassment or retribution
- are confident that they can speak up and won't be humiliated, ignored, or blamed.
- know they can ask questions when they are unsure about something
- tend to trust and respect their colleagues
- report mistakes quickly so that prompt, corrective action can be taken
- coordinate across groups or departments seamlessly
- share potentially game-changing ideas for innovation

It is not about lowering performance standards or avoiding accountability but rather about fostering an atmosphere where people feel safe taking interpersonal risks.

Psychological safety at work does not mean that everybody is nice to each other all the time. It means that people feel free to “brainstorm outloud,” voice half-finished thoughts, openly challenge the status quo, share feedback, and work through disagreements together.”

Establishing the Conditions

Mistakes and Failures

- Encourages honest discussion
- Provides learning opportunities
- Eliminates blame (and hiding mistakes)
- Experimentation, and thus failure, is normalized

- Encouraging brainstorming and out-of-the-box thinking

- Creating processes (i.e., turn-taking, modes of communication, now let's break it, debriefing)

Cultivating the Garden of Psychological Safety

Establishing the Conditions
Encouraging Growth
Responding Constructively

45

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

Responding
Constructively

- Debrief regularly
- Appreciate acts of vulnerability
- Redefining mistakes and failures as “lessons learned”
- Accept feedback with grace and act when appropriate
- Model respect

When a work environment has reasonably high psychological safety, good things happen:

- mistakes are reported quickly
- so that prompt corrective action can be taken;
- seamless coordination across groups or departments is enabled,
- and potentially game-changing ideas for innovation are shared.

In short, psychological safety is a crucial source of value creation in organizations operating in a complex, changing environment.
